FedEx Custom Critical

Philanthropy is a part of the corporate culture at FedEx Custom Critical, which has been providing outstanding volunteerism and philanthropy to organizations in the Greater Akron community for many years.

Based out of Green, Ohio, FedEx Custom Critical is one of North America's largest providers of expedited shipments, and yet it still finds time to support more than 50 local organizations annually. Serving community and social needs is a mission embraced by the entire company. The team members believe the ability to support the community in which their employees live and work plays a vital role in successfully operating the business.

They have shown significant impact in the Akron area, volunteering in the community and donating more than $176,000 to local organizations just in the past year. FedEx Custom Critical's President and CEO, Virginia Albanese, serves on a number of boards that benefit Northeast Ohio, including Akron Zoo, Akron Children's Hospital, and the Akron Community Foundation.

Over the last two years, the company has had more than 1,000 volunteer hours in the Summit County community. The team members happily volunteer their time at community events, such as Akron Children's Have a Heart/Do Your Part Radiothon, the American Red Cross dinners, Blessings in a Backpack, the Akron Marathon and Akron Children's Holiday Tree Festival. Team members also help out at organizations throughout the area such as Boys & Girls Clubs of the Western Reserve, Habitat for Humanity, the Akron-Canton Regional Foodbank, the Akron Zoo, Green Good Neighbors, United Way, and many others.
